TAFTVILLE

Leo Lepage of Norwich Avenue leaves town this (Wednesday) morning for Montreal, Canada, where he will join two friends and start on a five weeks fishing trip through country north of that city. Reports from that district indicate plenty of sport for the anglers.
The large maple tree that was blown over Monday afternoon in front of the residence of the late Henry H. Lepage on North B Street, fell directly across the street, closing the thoroughfare to all traffic for the rest of the day. No one was injured although several children were playing nearby. For the remainder of the day, the fallen tree furnished a great deal of sport for the youngsters of the neighborhood, who swung and played about it. The tree has been converted into firewood.

COUNTY CONGREGATIONALIST'S ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT PARK CHURCH

Conference Address.
Rev. Dr. Lee presided at the conference of the meeting, introducing Professor Tweedy, who was listened to with the closest attention. He said he wanted to speak to the young people about a work of reformation for the future in which they were to play a large part and he went on to call attention to two roads in the future down which everyone of us will have to walk. In the past, he said, the nations had walked to their thrones over a bloody highway strewn with waste and wreck. So long as only brute force occupied this planet, brute force prevailed, but gradually brains began to show their right to survive. Yet the man with the greatest brain might be the greatest rascal, and then character came to the front as being the most fit to survive.
All history shows that this pathway of pure brute force has not worked well in the household, in industrial life and in international political affairs. Mere brute force will not settle any industrial dispute and we are coming to see that the only settlement can be reached in a spirit of brotherhood.
Professor Tweedy spoke of the inconceivable billions in money and the millions of lives that had been spent in the World War and said that the spirit of hatred, distrust and social antipathies was still preparing the way for the world to walk in the highway of brute force, that is still being tried.
But there is another road straight before the Christian church, a highway which Professor Tweedy likened to the road that the Samson Islanders built for Robert Louis Stevenson and called "the road of the loving heart." This road runs through history and nature and has its light to be there or the God of history and nature would not have placed it there.
This is the road to be substituted for the highway of brute force, bringing a brotherhood of men and women in the Christian law of love. That law works well and has been proved by experience. It works well in the home and will work in business relations. Nothing else will work in business or in international relations. Nothing else will keep us from going on the rocks, and we are near going to shipwreck, now. Down this road of love we see the only future of civilization and God is striving to have us walk in it.
Back of brute force lies sheer selfishness, and not until we have the mind of Jesus for service and self sacrifice can we cease to travel the road of brute force, to shipwreck, now. Down this road of love we see the only future of civilization and God is striving to have us walk in it.
The meeting opened with a devotional service led by Rev. Dr. S. H. Howe and the business session followed with Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, moderator, presiding.
Rev. Gordon F. Bailey of Norwich Town, registrar, read his annual report and that of the treasurer, Dr. J. H. Weeks of Stonington, which were accepted. Rev. Frederick Macleod of Hanover and J. S. Bailey of New London were appointed the committee on reception to the young people to make it their task for the future to substitute for the rule of brute force the rule of the spirit of brotherhood so that war may be at an end and the world may walk in peace. This furnished the keynote for the association meeting which had for its general idea a conference of young people and the church.

The oxfords women want

WALK-OVER oxfords are the kind that fit feet smartly. They give poise to the ankles and a look of trimness to the feet, because they fit so well. The new shades of sepia kid are found at the Walk-Over store. Notice the slightly rounder toe—so popular this spring.

POETRY

MAY.
May queen of blossoms,
And fulfilling flowers,
With what pretty music
Shall we charm the hours?
Will thou have pipe and reed,
Flower in the green mead?
Or to the lute give heed
In the green bowers?

Thou hast no need of us,
Or pipe or reed;
Thou art the golden bee
Ripened with dew;
And many thousand more
Soughers and hums are here—
Filling earth's grassy floor
With new desire.

Thou hast thy mighty herds,
Tame and free-lives;
Doubt not the music too
In the deep rivers;
And the whole plumed flight
Waiting the day and night—
Up at the gates of light.
See the lark quivers!

—Edward Howard-Tufnell, in Indianapolis News.

HURDY-GURDY DAYS.
April walks beside me in hooded cloak of brown.
Primrose gold above the hill the length-
ened sunsets burn;
Every wind a minstrel goes, singing
through a rift of misty screen.
For hurdy-gurdy days are here—and
May is at the turn!

May is at the turning in a blur of mill-
blue haze,
The first of last-moore drifting
down the dizzy city ways.
There's a flash of Sheldrick weather
through a rift of misty screen.
And the dawn of dreams remembered
in a gray world's eye.

A battered hurdy-gurdy at the corner of the street
Old tunes, forgotten tunes, and lilacbreath and fern.
Where the great old baskets spill their fragrance, haunting sweet.
And every day is yesterday—and yesterday is at the turn!

May is at the turning like a gypsy in the
gamin of the year.
With leaf-mist at her girdle, and her
brown hair parted with rain;
There's the great old new grass creeping
up the roadways from the south.
And the dawns of laughter as a gray world's mouth.

March ran whistling down the hill, the
gamin of the year.
April's but a child at school, with life
Sudden through the city-gray, riotous and dear.
Hurdy-gurdy strum the dusk—and
May is at the turn!

May is at the turning in a burst of
tulip-flame,
With a sparkling of cowslip-gold to
the street's end.
There's a young moon's silver sickle
gleaming through orchard boughs start.

And forgotten love-songs throbbing in
the gray world's heart.
—Maudie Haskett Clark, in Good Housekeeping.
